This is a humorous take on the use of computers in teaching chemistry. The author suggests that computers should be used as辅助工具 (辅助) to enhance understanding rather than substituting for traditional teaching methods. The text highlights the importance of balancing the use of technology with traditional methods to ensure the effectiveness of teaching and learning in the field of chemistry.